Gender Equality and Nutrition

In 2017-2018, Nutrition International redefined our impact: coverage, gender equality and nutrition. Underpinning all of our development programs, it will start with capacity building and technical assistance that seeks to address gender inequality, this strategy will be focused on women and girls. That is why a focus on nutrition and gender equality is critical to unlock human potential in developing countries.

Access to good nutrition is a fundamental human right and a building block for achieving the 2030 Agendas for Sustainable Development. It will start with capacity building and technical assistance that seeks to address gender inequality, this strategy will be focused on women and girls.

As a result of our concrete analysis to inform designing, integration of nutrition interventions and capacity building through more local platforms, we were able to increase funding for nutrition. Nutrition International reached agreements with the Philippine government to deliver vitamin A to the most vulnerable under-five children in the Philippines. The Nutrition International team then travelled to the Philippines and conducted a workshop for the Department of Health, working with UNICEF and the government to deliver on a 12-year vitamin A delivery program. This year, Nutrition International contributed to the Right Start Initiative, which is helping to reduce stunting in under-five children worldwide.

Nutrition International will transform the lives of 1 Billion by 2030. Nutrition International is committed to generating global-scale, sustainable improvements in nutrition outcomes for the people we serve. For more information on our work in the world, visit NutritionIntl.org.
